Building Your Brand

- Module 1 Understanding Your Market & Current Brand Perceptions
Who are the customers likely to enroll in your workforce or education programs? What do they currently think about your brand? What are the motivators and barriers to getting them engaged with you? Prior to crafting and telling your brand story, you must have an extensive understanding of your market and what your community thinks about you. This series gives you a brand blueprint to help you understand your unique selling proposition to build a high in-demand brand. Learn how to position your mission and create highly effective messages to communicate your unique value in the market.
- Module 2 Building Ideal Customer Profiles
Workforce and education organizations serve widely diverse audiences many of which include underserved and underrepresented populations. They also want to engage different industries and employers to hire and provide work-based learning opportunities to their jobseekers, students and youth. Your ideal customer is someone who gets their exact needs met by what you're offering. Narrowing the market allows you to save valuable resources to get to the likely market segments who need and want your products and/or services. This module teaches you how to get inside the head of your ideal customers and understand what motivates them in order to be effective at communications.

- Module 6 The Wonderful World of Digital
Reaching customers online is what digital marketing is all about; it's the promotion of your brand to connect with potential customers using the internet and other forms of digital communication. This includes nurturing your online footprint through your website, search engine optimization and search engine marketing. It also entails proactive outreach through email marketing. Learn all of the elements of digital marketing in this module.
- Module 7 Direct and Experiential Marketing
Direct marketing is a form of advertising that involves directly communicating a marketing message to a potential customer, usually through mail, email, telemarketing, or door-to-door visits. Experiential marketing, also called experiential brand marketing, grassroots marketing, engagement marketing, or live marketing, is a way for brands to connect with consumers through experiences. In an ever-crowded digital landscape, how can these two forms of marketing differentiate your brand? You'll learn when and how to implement these high-touch marketing strategies and some of our favorite resources.
